

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for maximizing the number of content titles available within a video on demand system by storing an initial portion of each title on a primary storage device and a remaining portion of each title on a secondary storage device, wherein the secondary storage device is used to provision the primary storage device in response to a subscriber request for a title having an initial portion stored on the primary storage device.

2003027460